Feedback for the leaders:

(size corresponds to frequency of response)

- Good job / Great job / Awesome / You guys rock!
- Bring / give out more stress balls.
- I liked it / It was fun / (Not boring).
- It was helpful / informative / I learned a lot / It made me think.
- I liked the paper throwing activity / Paper throwing was fun.
- Good job explaining how this is important.
- Be careful on the internet.
- Repeatedly and only talked about how the internet was “evil”
- Why do we have to talk about this stuff?
- Don’t bully / cyberbully!
- I do not do anything inappropriate.
- Don’t throw paper at the Smart Board – it costs thousands!
- Nothing other than question 9 [Have you ever done or said anything online you wouldn’t say in person, what was it?], it might be personal.
- Make a question for how often a kids uses an iPod, iPad, iPhone.
- You should do making REAL friends online.
- I would like to hear more from the leaders and less from the students.
- I think we should talk more instead of the leaders.
- Maybe try to keep people more involved.
- Less talking.
- This is a strange survey for kids that don’t have a cell phone or use the internet. You should make the questions two parts, so the kids without cell phones or internet can answer a different question on a similar topic.
- The lesson made me realize how much time we spend on computers and what can happen on the internet.
- Helped me learn more about how to prevent cyberbullying.
- Be specific when you say “Do you know someone?” in question 6. Do you mean know as in real life?
- Not so personal please.
