Preparing for Emergencies

The Boards of Health and Health Departments in the Norfolk County-8 (NC-8) Medical Reserve Corps work collaboratively in order to prepare for a range of emergencies and disasters.

An active and trained Medical Reserve Corps strengthens local public health and improves emergency preparedness in our communities.

Participation

Residents with medical expertise as well as those with other important skills are needed to assist your local Board of Health/Health Department in the event of a public health emergency.

In addition, volunteers can also help with other local public health events, like flu clinics, etc.

Training

Volunteers will be invited to attend various trainings throughout the year.

These trainings help volunteers to develop skills in health promotion, emergency preparedness and response, while also allowing volunteers to become familiar with each other and their roles in an emergency.
